Residential service, commercial tenant-improvement, and design-build solar PV work each carry a different risk profile within the electrician trade -- break out the mix accurately.

DESCRIPTION OF OPERATIONS (TYPICAL JOB TYPES, BUILDING TYPES, NEW CONSTRUCTION VS. SERVICE/REPAIR MIX)

Types: residential service/repair; residential new construction; commercial tenant improvement; commercial new construction; industrial; solar PV installation; EV charging station installation; low-voltage/data/security wiring; generator installation; other.

 IF YES, EXPLAIN

2-2 Does the applicant perform solar PV, battery storage, or EV charging station installation? ☐ Yes ☐ No

This work shifts risk profile: rooftop fall exposure combines with a professional-liability component from string sizing and interconnection specifications, and typically requires separate underwriting from pure electrical work.

2-3 Does the applicant subcontract any portion of electrical work to other licensed electricians? ☐ Yes ☐ No
 IF YES, EXPLAIN

3 EXPOSURE & RISK QUESTIONS — ELECTRICAL SAFETY

These questions track NFPA 70E (the OSHA-referenced electrical safety standard) and 29 CFR 1910.333(b) lockout/tagout requirements specific to electrical work.
